Military vows tougher measures to halt rioting as violence spreads in Algeria

ALGIERS, Oct 9, (Agencies): The Algerian military today vowed tougher measures to suppress rioting, but new clashes erupted in unrest that hospital sources and diplomats said had taken at least 50 lives.

Unofficial estimates put the death toll in five days of street battle at more than 200.

Information compiled from hospital and police sources in various parts of the country, each source providing fragmentary information, indicated at least 200 killed and several hundred people injured. It seemed likely the actual death toll was higher. Doctors in several major hospitals have become more willing to report the scope of the casual-ties, but only when guaranteed anonymity.

Although a communique from the military command set up to halt the violence warned against new disturbances, travellers reported fresh clashes with young people in Tiaret, 250 km (150 miles) southwest of the capital.

The travellers said the violence, which followed the initial riots in Algiers and Oran, caused considerable damage to government property. Residents, contacted by telephone, said security forces sent to the town had violent clashes with rioters this morning.
In Oran, Algeria's second largest city, residents reported gun-fire and explosions today and sources at the main hospital said it had taken in 18 dead and 100 wounded since the protests began there on Friday.

The death toll rose in Algiers, where troops opened fire last night to disperse hundreds of youths and Islamic militants defying a curfew, residents and hospital sources said.

Sunday editions of all newspapers carried a communique from the military command that said conditions were returning to normal but promising tougher law enforcement.

*The military command charged with restoring law and order intends to intensify its efforts further in order to restore in the shortest possible time normality in all state-run institutions, in all educational, social and profes-sional fields," the communique

The statement warned that all emergency measures, such as a nightly 10 pm to 7 am curfew, remained in force and must be respected. The government has admitted the riots, over austerity measures and food shortages, spread beyond Algeria's two main cities. But it has given no casualty figures, with officials saying only there were casualties among both security forces and civilians.

In the western town of Mascara, residents said four people were killed and 10 wounded in clashes yesterday.

Algiers was calm during the day today but a hospital worker said in Belcourt, one of the poor areas most devastated by the riots, that 17 bodies had been taken to Mustapha civil hospital today after a night of heavy gun-

Diplomats said up to 15 bodies were taken to hospitals after troops fired on protesters defying a curfew last night in Belcourt and the poorer districts of Bab El Oued, one of the most densely populated areas of the capital.

Diplomats also said one hospital alone reported receiving up to 20 bodies after protesters surged into the streets from Friday prayers in the mosques, which have been a centre of dissent.

Protests

Most of the protests have been aimed at government-owned shops and offices, especially buildings associated with the National Liberation Front, which has ruled Algeria as a oneparty state since independence from France in 1962.

Diplomats blame rising prices and widespread unemployment among youths — 57 per cent of Algeria's 24 million inhabitants are under 21. Interior Minister El Hadi Khediri, in the first broadcast by a government official since the disturbances began, told Algerians last night to ask themselves: "Is wrecking schools and buses and shops the answer to our problems?

Sudan, Iraq try to patch up diplomatic row

BAGHDAD, Oct 9, (Reuter): The defence ministers of Sudan and Iraq held talks today on ways to improve relations which came under severe strain earlier

Sudan's General Abdul-Maged Hamed Khalil told Iraq's General Adnan Kheirullah that Khartoum wanted to create a sound basis for boosting cooperation with Baghdad, the INA reported.

It also said he thanked Iraq for ending relief supplies to Sudan after devastating floods hit Khartoum and surrounding areas in August.

Khalil is the first top-level Sudanese official to visit Baghdad since Sudan blamed an Iraqi diplomat for the murder of Iraqi dissident leader Mahdi Al Hakim in Khartoum in January.

Iraq denied the accusation, which it said was fabricated by pro-Iranian circles, and withdrew its ambassador.

Uganda sacks its envoy to France

KAMPALA, Oct 9, (UPI): The Ugandan government sacked its Ambassador to France, Princess Elizabeth Bagaya — who dictator Idi Amin once accused of making love in Paris airport toilet — Kampala's New Vision paper said.

In its weekend edition, the paper quoted Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Tarsis Kabwegyere as saying the conduct of the former actress and fashion model had "become too undiplomatic and unsatisfactory for her to represent the country."

"This conduct could result in embarrassment to the government," he said without spelling out the exact reason for cancelling the appointment of the British-trained barrister.

BELGRADE, Oct 9, (Reuter): Police in the south Yugoslav Republic of Montenegro said today they had banned all protest rallies in the regional capital Titograd after clashes yesterday between paramilitary police and demonstrators.

Dukakis rejects accusation by Bush

LEWISTON, Maine. Oct 9, (Reuter): Democratic presidential contender Michael Dukakis made an emotional defence yesterday of his record on justice and accused rival George Bush of "playing politics with the tragedy of crime."

Dukakis rejected Bush's attempts to portray him as a liberal who is soft on criminals and insensitive to their victims and said both his father and brother had been victims of violent crime.

The Massachusetts governor, with his 85-year-old mother Euterpe on stage, told a university audience his brother Stelian was killed by a hit-and-run driver and his father Panos had once been robbed, tied-up and stranded in his office.

ded in his office.
"I don't need any lectures from Mr Bush on crime-fighting or on the sensitivity or compassion we must extend to the victures of crime," Dukakis said to the cheers of several thousand people attending his address.

Shameless

"Let's look at the facts and stop this shameless playing of politics with the tragedy of crime," he said in the address at Bates College, where his mother, father and brother were students.

Vice-President Bush, the Republican candidate, has repeatedly challenged Dukakis' record on crime — singling out a Massachusetts furlough programme which gives weekend passes to some convicts.

end passes to some convicts.

Dukakis said Bush's attacks were a bid to deflect criticism of Republican vice-presidential nominee Dan Quayle.

Reports that Bush was cooling toward his running-mate surfaced after Quayle was perceived to have done poorly in a debate last Wednesday with his Democratic counterpart, Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.

Concept

Bush yesterday lashed out at the media for suggesting that he is backing away from Quayle.

"This concept that I see in some of these reports that I am not supportive of Dan Quayle are absolutely ludicrous," Bush told reporters outside his Washington home.

"He did well in that debate, he has my full support and he is: getting strong support since the debate and before around this country," a clearly irritated Bush said.

Computerized sound and light extravaganza

Composer Jarre dazzles London crowd

LONDON, Oct 9, (UPI): French high-tech composer Jean-Michel Jarre, using lasers, searchlights and fireworks, lit up the cloudy skies of London yesterday and dazzled a crowd officials estimated at 100,000 people with a light-and-sound show.

After several last-minute delays over whether he would be allowed to hold the performance, the $16 million computerized sound-and-light extravaganza came off without any major hitches.

Jarre said afterwards he was "delighted" with the results and that it had been worth all the Authorities had closed the River Thames in London to all weekend commercial traffic for the show, staged from a fleet of 12 barges tethered together in the middle of the river east of the Tower of London in the city's Docklands neighbourhood.

In London, Diana, Princess of Wales, will be the star guest at today's performance, officials said. Organizers of the concert said they had sold all 100,000 tickets for two evening concerts, yesterday and today.

Jarre, 41, who drew a record crowd for an outdoor concert of about 1.2 million people in Houston, Texas, has already attracted big audiences in China, Paris and Lyon.

Paris and Lyon.
Although the London show, "Destination Docklands," will be smaller than the Texas concert, Jarre said he planned to dazzle the area of derelict cranes and disused sheds alongside new high-rise waterfront buildings with an effusion of lasers, fireworks and electronic music.

The persistent Jarre had wanted to make the spectacle even more grandiose, but the local council turned him down last month on the grounds that the event could endanger public safety.

Undaunted, he redrafted his plans to stage two smaller concerts, and only got the final goahead yesterday from the Newham Borough Council which administers Docklands.

The last-minute decision was a consolation for Jarre, who has failed so far to get permission to stage an even bigger event in Paris next year to mark the 200th anniversary of the storming of the Bastille.

But the French Revolution aside, Jarre said the London site in one of Europe's fastest growing urban developments was ideal.

Pope raps Europe's moral decline

STRASBOURG, France, Oct 9. (Reuter): Pope John Paul launched a ringing attack on moral decline and the pursuit of material wealth in Europe today, saying the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church had, been rejected in the name of liberty.

Hentold 40,000, people at an mass in Strasbourg on the second day of his tour of eastern France:
"In Europe, a Christian continent, the sense of morality is weakening. The very word (biblical) "commandment" is often rejected. In the name of liberty, the rules are rejected, the moral teaching of the church is ignored."

The Pontiff said modern man in Europe "has great wealth unjustly divided it is true — but more abundant than many of his brothers in the world.

"He clings to it, he expends much of his strength to increase it. He also has sensual riches and too often turns away from God and from his neighbour to satisfy the desires which imprison him.

A desires which imprison him.

"He" has the wealth of knowledge and thinks he possesses the truth but he remains deaf to the wisdom of God."

The Pontiff has frequently drawn a contrast during his trip so far between the deep Christian traditions of Europe, which he says should unite the continent, and the temptations of material prosperity.

"Man has the riches of his power, but he dominates and dis-dains his fellow men instead of being at their service like Christ, the servant," he said in his homily.

The Pope celebrated the mass from a white stage decorated with flowers in the yellow papal colours and backed by a huge simple wood cross.

Earlier the Pope visited a school for deaf and dumb and blind children where he said handicapped people often had a greater appreciation of God's gifts. The healthy were blinded by a materialist society.

"You often show a radiant love, envied by the healthy," he told the children.

The Pope kissed many of the 200 pupils at the school and said: Perhaps some of you have not seen me or heard me, but you have felt my presence. A kiss is very important in establishing a

Khartoum to hold talks with rebels

KHARTOUM, Oct 9, (UPI): A delegation of Sudan's co-ruling Democratic Unionist Party is scheduled to hold talks next week with rebels of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in a bid to end five years of civil strife, Khartoum's Al Ayam daily said

The paper said the DUP delegation, led by former Foreign Minister Mohamed Tawfig would leave for the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa Wednesday to meet SPLA

The meeting is expected to precede a new round of talks between Sudanese Prime Minister Sadiq Al Mahdi and SPLA leader John Garang in the Ugandan capital of Kampala.

One killed as violence | Latvian Popular Front set to flares in Bangladesh

DHAKA, Oct 9, (AP): One person was killed and 40 others injured during political clashes in southeastern Chittagong district, newspapers and police reported today.

A supporter of the fundamentalist Jamaat-e-Islami was killed on Saturday and several others injured during fighting in the villages of Barbakunda, Sitakunda and Kumuria, district police said. Chittagong is 216 km (135 miles) southeast of here.

While police refused to describe the violence, the independent Bengali newspaper Sangram said workers of leftist Bangladesh National Socialist Party stopped buses on a major highway and dragged passengers and beat them up. Islamic bili

Meanwhile, Bangladesh has set up a national disaster prevention council under President Hessain Mohammad Ershad to advise the government how to minimise loss of life and property in floods and other calamities.

Floods last month, the worst on record, killed at least 3,000 people and left tens of millions homeless in Bangladesh, one of the world's poorest countries.

Ershad told survivors in Gaibandha district on Friday the country must be ready to face more floods until a permanent solution was found. He hoped other countries, including Bangladesh's giant neighbour India. would help evolve a joint strategy against the annual inundation. The floods, which often sweep the whole of the South Asian region, are blamed by some experts on tree-felling in the Himalayan foothills and lack of an infrastructure to hold back waters from melting snow.

Exercise at Indian nuclear power plant causes panic

BOMBAY, Oct 9, (AP): An exercise at India's oldest operating nuclear power plant was mis-taken for a real disaster by thousands of people who locked their doors and fled in panic, officials said.

At least 25,000 people living near the Tarapur atomic power plant fled after authorities declared a mock emergency yesterday, in order to check evacuation procedures within a 16kilometre radius of the plant, officials said.

The Tarapur plant, constructed in 1969, is located 120 kilometres north of Bombay. G.B. Pingulkar, the top goverpment official in the area, said the people locked their homes and fled despite announcements beforehand that the emergency was not real. "People came to me asking if the plant was leaking," Pingulkar said. "I was surprised." The panic spread also to industries in Tarapur town and many factories closed down due to absenteeism.

adopt charter at congress

MOSCOW, Oct 9, (Reuter): The founding congress of the Latvian Popular Front was due to wind up today with the adoption of a charter expected to set out demands in the Soviet Baltic republic for greater autonomy from Moscow.

The two-day Congress appeared to be modelled on a similar founding meeting last weekend of the Popular Front Movement in the neighbouring republic of Estonia, which called for a reduction of Moscow's control and challenged Communist Party domination.

Latvian journalists attending the Congress in the capital, Riga. said yesterday the 1,100 delegates had elected commissions to study a number of issues including the right of the formerly independent republic of economic autonomy.

They said the Congress had also considered proposals to field Popular Front candidates at state elections and to give Latvian authorities the right to veto Soviet legislation directly affecting the republic. Soviet television yesterday reported that the Congress was taking place. It did not mention the autonomy issue, but said the meeting represented about 130,000 front members.

examining three main proposals: On ways of fighting bureaucracy, turning Latvia into a "state based on law," and implementing decisions of the June Communist Party conference.

All three proposals were in line with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's declared policy of channelling more executive power from the party to government bodies and of encouraging more decision-making at republican, regional and local levels.

The television said the Congress had been addressed by Latvia's newly appointed Com-munist Party chief Jan Vigris, but gave no details of his speech. Vigris was moved to the party leadership last week from the post of Latvian President.

The new President, Anatoly Gurbanov — a Latvian despite his Russian name — addressed a rally of 100,000 people in Riga on Friday, where he spoke about "people's power," and ways to make life in the republic more Welcome

His speech, according to local journalists, received an enthusiastic welcome from the crowd. Many people waved the traditional red-and-white-striped Latvian flag, restored to official status this week after 48 years of Soviet power.

BRITAIN'S University of Strathclyde is hoping to reach an agreement with Kuwait's Faculty of Technological Studies on staff training and joint research programmes.

Dr Kamal Andrawes of Strathclyde's Faculty of Engineering, who left Kuwait on Saturday after a week's visit, said the University of Strathclyde is also ready to help Kuwaiti graduates obtain a Bachelor of Science degree in engineering.

Bahrain, Qatar agree to settle island dispute

SHARJAH, Oct 9, (KUNA): Qatar and Bahrain have agreed to settle their dispute on "Fishet Al Debal" island without resorting to the International Court of Justice in The Hague, a press report said here today.

Director calls for organisation of real estate sector

REAL ESTATE is still a vital sector in Kuwait's national economy and is considered one of the most prominent investment alternatives in the country. Despite repeated serious attempts to organise the sector it has several shortcomings due to the lack of an appropriate tech-

A local daily interviewed Abdurahman Al Humoud, director general of Al Shall for Consulting and Real Estate Services on this issue. Inadequate

The official said that the real estate market requires an organisation to expand the financing of real estate. The Ministry of Commerce and Industry has no precise plans to govern the real estate marekt and does not have the technical staff to shoulder the responsibility, he added.

The real estate sector is affected by several factors including the political climate and stability in the region and the capability of the financial institutions and the government to provide adequate funds, Al Shall said.

He commented that real estate costs in Kuwait are relatively high compared to other Gulf and world countries and attributed this to the lack of other investment opportunities and the inadequate amount of land to be used for real estate deals.

Al Humoud said that though speculation in the real estate market is inevitable, it should be balanced and logical.

He added that any proposals to organise the real estate market should take into account the expected increase in population and the market situation in the light of supply and demand.

A review of the experiments of the last two decades in this connection should be undertaken, Al Humoud concluded.

EVERYTHING turns full cycle in Hindi films - from romantic fantasy to seedy revenge. Thus, one permanent fixture is the bad, bad wolf in sheep's clothing, wearing a sinister scowl, leather gloves and black suits. In recent months, the population of villains has been growing perhaps to keep up with the population explosion around the world. The hero has the strenuous task of fighting not one but several wolves, and emerging victorious. That the hero always wins is a miracle.

In recent films, the villain comes accompanied — in pairs, in trios, or in fours, to complete the devil's kingdom. Filmmakers have yet to get all the Hindi film villains together for a night out with the bad guys; perhaps such a venture is already on the floors somewhere in a Bombay

Let's get acquainted with the thoroughly spoiled trio: Shan-tilal (Shakti Kapoor), a guy with shifty eyes who has this uncanny habit of being "temporarily" out of gear to give "performance" to his evil plots; Premanand (Sadashiv Amrapurkar) who becomes Krodhanand each time his plans fail; and Anupam Kher, the neutral buffer, uniting the two evil for-

ARAB®TIMES

Thought for today

HE who sings frightens away his ills - Miguel de Cervantes, Spanish writer (1547-1616).

Growing market vital for investors

THERE are some oil-rich Arab countries with surplus money in both the private and public sectors, which they invest in non-Arab countries.

Such investments are not secret and everything is done in accordance with legal requirements, but there is insufficient protest against this practice.

We say this because there are some Arab countries which really need to see Arab funds invested with them to use available opportunities before their people revolt against the governments.

Nevertheless, Arab funds cannot move to the markets of some Arab countries whose economic identities we do

The governments of such countries indulge in a lot of groundless talk about achievements and unrealistic future plans and have police states with which it is very difficult to negotiate.

There is real interest in investing Arab funds in Arab countries, but there are still some political trends towards Marxist ideologies, in spite of the fact that people who have long believed in such theories have now started to discard them after realising that they do not feed people and make the rich poor and exploit the weaker sections of the community.

There is also the problem that some Arab countries feel that their political regimes are superior and thus refuse to co-operate with other political regimes, thinking them to be on the verge of collapse.

The result is that the people of these countries have missed many opportunities, have faced economic troubles and inhabit countries with neither economic identity nor political colour.

These countries are, moreover, very unstable. Sometimes they favour violence and sometimes they are against it, sometimes threatening and sometimes accom-

Again, we stress the existence of a willingness to invest in Arab countries, but there needs to be the kind of warm atmosphere which is found in other organised countries, which protect and preserve the rights of investors and are open to the world economy. Without this, Arab funds will be kept away from those Arab countries that close heir doors on all and feel that they have superior political Unfortunately, Arab funds cannot be invested in those countries until investors are provided with the same conditions as foreign funds and are not subjected to biracy and other harassments. Investors do not know on most occasions with which side to deal.

The Arab world is full of investment opportunities which require promotion and marketing. This would pertainly be better than blutting our people by talking about imaginary future plans.

Sudan stalls debate on harsh Islamic laws

By Alfred Taban

KHARTOUM. (Reuter): Sudan, stricken by war, famine and flood, has put off a divisive debate on barsh Islamic laws dedreeing amoutation for thieves and stoning for adulterers.

The new code would replace one which former President Judfar Nimeiri enacted five years ago, and whose provisions have been virtually ignored since he was overthrown in 1985.

Islamic law (sharia) makes us third class citizens in our country of birth," said Richard Mokobe, a Christian southerner and minister of local government in Prime Minister Sadeq Al Mahdi's

The first class citizens are Muslim men, the second class are Muslim women — we come third." he said.

Sidestepped

Last Tuesday. Sudan's constildent assembly, the country's parliament, sidestepped a vote on the revival of sharia which it had been discussing for two weeks. The plans were instead to a legislative committee for further study.

Tac assembly was then recessed for 45 days. It is due to resume on Nov 21.

Western diplomats said the intpoduction of sharia by Nifficiri was a major recruiting agent for the rebel Sudan Peo-pic's Liberation Front (SPLA) which has been fighting government forces in the famine-hit south since 1983.

Under the latest government plans, southern Sudan was to be exempt from sharia, although the estimated three million southerners in the north would chile under its jurisdiction.

Opposed Even with such an arrangement, members of parliament from the mainly Christian and animist south were totally opposed to the code.

When it was presented for debate on Sept 19, almost all the southerners walked out of parliament.

The fundamentalist Muslim

Brotherhood Party — the National Islamic Front (NIF) —

criticised the walkout as undemocratic. "There is not a single party in northern Sudan which does not have Islamisation in its programme. We have therefore been elected to bring sharia law into force," said Ahmed Abdel Rahman Mohamed, an NIF parliamentarian and minister of social welfare and rehabilitation. NIF, which has 51 seats in the 301-member assembly, has vowed to ensure the laws are passed. It has six members on the legislative committee.

Most southerners in parliament are members of the Union of Sudan African Parties (USAP) which went into opposi-tion after Mahdi brought the NIF into his new coalition government in May.
"We have been elected to fight sharia laws," said southern deputy Lasu Gale.

Submitted

The chairman of the legislative committee Taj Al Sir Monofoli said the code would be re-submitted to the assembly when it reconvened later in the year.

Diplomats in Khartoum said Mahdi -- as head of the 102 seat Umma Party — could work out a compromise which would lessen the divisions over the sharia

He is on record as saying that some if not all sharia punishments, including lashing and amputation, are not really provided for in the Muslim holy book, the Quran.

Penalties

Sharia imposes floggings of up to 100 lashes for all offenders except those convicted of crimes punishable by the loss of a hand or foot or death.

The penalties were rigidly applied in 1984 in Sudan, a vast country of 23 million people from more than 100 ethnically and religiously diverse tribes.

During that year about 70 people lost either a hand or a foot.

New strategy for Palestinian struggle

PLO split on timing of 'parliament' session

By Mona Ziade

NICOSIA. Cyprus, (AP): The PLO is torn by a fierce debate over the timing of a muchdelayed meeting of its parliament-in-exile to forge a new political strategy for the Palestinians tortuous struggle for an independent homeland.

Some Palestine Liberation Organization leaders want to convene the Palestine National Council as soon as possible to capitalize on the widespread sympathy won for their cause by a 10-month-old Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied

But others, supported by the Soviet Union and Egypt, argue that the 450-seat council, which includes non-PLO members, should not meet until after Israel's parliamentary elections Nov I and US presidential elections Nov 8.

The main thrust of the PLO's efforts is aimed primarily at put-ting pressure on the United States and Israel to recognize Palestinians' right to self-determination and break the impasse in efforts to end the 40-year-old Arab-Israeli conflict.

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and the movement's ruling executive committee have narrowed to three the options they will present to the PNC to achieve an independent Palestinian state in Israeli-occupied Options The options hammered out by the 15-man committee, after meeting almost continuously and often heatedly for several weeks, are a unilateral declaration of independence in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, formation of a provisional government or a combination of both.

The PLO might also ask the PNC to endorse asking the United Nations to take a trusteeship role in the occupied territories until an independent Palestinian state can be formally established. Informed Palestinian sources said Arafat realizes that hesitation in forging a breakthrough after nearly a year of violence in the West Bank and Gaza could shift the centre of gravity away from him to the uprising's clandestine leadership.

So he wants the PNC to convene at the earliest possible date

Yasser Arafat now that internal differences over the options have been parrowed, if not eliminated. A PNC session set for early October was postponed, and an effort to hold it before the end of the month also looks as though it has been scrapped.

Arafat's chief spokesman,
Bassam Abu Sharif, said in a telephone interview from Baghdad: "There are no reasons to delay. We're taking into account only our national interests, not what the Americans or Israelis

However, another senior PLO official, interviewed by telephone from Cairo, explained that taking any decision before the US and Israeli elections. which could radically alter the political landscape, could be counter-productive.

"It may elicit attitudes by candidates which later will be difficult to rescind," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

He said Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak advised Arafat in Cairo last month to wait until after the US presidential election to convene the PNC.

However, Mubarak stressed that Cairo would back whetever option the PNC decided on. Arafat has been globe-trotting, seeking support for an independent Palestinian state.

He has made increasingly conciliatory speeches. Undecided

The Palestinians are also divided over the contentious question of recognition of Israel. Arafat, as he often does on critical issues, appears to be undecided.

Some of his aides, and reportedly the Soviets as well, believe that recognizing the Jewish state they have fought since 1948 will break down US and Israeli opposition to talking directly to the PLO.

Both US Presidential candidates, Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis have declared that there can be no direct contacts with the PLO in any peace negotiations until the Palestinians recognize Israel.

Radical, Syrian-backed factions bitterly oppose recognizing what they call the "Zionist entity" in return for a Palestinian homeland in the occupied territories, instead of all of what used to be Palestine.

The bottom line is that Arafat knows that recognition of Israel is his ace in the hole, and that if he plays it too quickly, he will have nothing with which to bargain.

Despite the differences within the PLO and the Palestinian cause as a whole, the uprising has clearly accelerated the mainstream away from the concept of guerrilla war toward a political

But if the pragmatists and their 'two-state solution" — Jewish and Palestinian states co-existing side by side — succeed, the PNC will have to map out a charter for the proposed provisional government.

That would allow the PLO to quietly abandon the present PLO covenant which calls for the destruction of Israel.

Drawing up a new document would mean, in effect, a diplomatic renunciation of violence, another condition set by the Israelis and the Americans for dealing with the PLO.

Resist But such moves would be vehemently resisted by Syria and its hardline Arab allies.

Momentum for the declaration of an independent Palestinian state and a provisional government, possibly including non-PLO figures and prominent Palestinians from the occupied territories, intensified after King Hussein of Jordan announced July 31 he was severing all Jor-dan's legal and administrative links with the West Bank. The region was annexed by Jordan in 1950.

That gave Arafat little choice but to seek to step in and take over responsibility as the Palestinians' sole representative, a status long endorsed by Arab

The normalisation between Chad and Libya is good publicity for Khaddafi, who has been anxious to break out of diplomatic isolation ever since the 1986 US raids on his country, diplomats

The process was instigated by Khaddafi last May when he abruptly offered to recognise Chadian President Hissene Habre and to help rebuild Chadian towns bombed by the Libyan Air Force.

According to French press reports, Khaddali a few weeks later ordered the arrest in Tripoli of Chadian rebel leader Acheikh Bin Oumar, hitherto a protege of Libya.

Last month, Libya repatriated a first batch of Chadian prisoners of war through representatives of the Organisation of African Unity (OAU). Diplomats said the little publicity given by N'Diamena to the move reflected. Chad's growing embarrassment

But the 9-year-old ritualised exchange soon will be over. During the next few months, the Soviets will pack up their weapons and go home, meeting the terms of the Geneva accord pullout schedule and creating another chink in the armour of defences that protect Kabul from the rebel forces that surround it. "From a military point of view, this base is not valuable." said Lt Col Alexander Sherban of the Sharikar base. "All movement can be seen from the mountains or from the forest. It is not a correct place." He said the thinly manned Afghan Army would be better But Sharikar is one small part of Kabul's formidable defence network, sitting just outside the three "rings of steel" created to block advances by the USbacked guerrillas.

Soviet troops man numerous firebases and outposts, and, according to diplomats, still take care of most of the capital's defences. Presumably, when Sharikar and other Soviet-manned positions cease to become targets, the resistance will intensify attacks on government positions and step up pressure for storming President Najibullah's citadel of power. "Kabul is the key. Kabul is the prize," one Western diplomat said. "Whoever gets Kabul wins the war..'

Back to the cradle—Italian style

MILAN, Italy, (Agencies): It's back to the cradle for springsummer 1989, Italian style. After several sexy seasons of super short, hi-hugging styles, the top Italian designers who showed their collections in Milan last week are proposing a demure schoolgirl look for next year's warmer months.

Prim white blouses, practical jumpers, trim pants suits and diaphanous evening gowns are the staple items in the new boarding school wardrobe.

There are a lot of suff collars in the collections, almost no high heels, and even a few pairs of knee socks.

For a weekend off campus the designers offer a myriad of loose fitting pants and shorts, long skirts and tweedy cable

Best at this look — as well as being totally out of character was flamboyant Karl Lagerfeld, for Fendi, who showed in an elegant downtown Milan

Perfect

He kept his girls on the straight and narrow in perfect linen dresses with demure white collars and prim flat-ironed pleats. These fashionable uniforms came in lavender and ripe wheat shades.

In town for the day, the Fendi student looks like she stepped out of a 19th century painting in her neat little linen suit, with calf-length skirt and jacket fitted at the waist worn over a white blouse adorned with a tiny bow tie.

At night she shines in her delicate flax-coloured silk party dress complete with lace collar and white floral

Then it was Krizia's turn to outfit the schoolgirl. The Krizia boarding school is less rigorous than Fendi's, with more vacation time and a social calender full of garden parties, dances and weddings.

But the student at Miss Krizia's really excels on the social circuit. She stands out at garden parties in her tea rose pink chiffon tunic dress, spiffed up by a suede leather sash, and is the belle of the ball in her sweet sixteen powder pink gown in dainty ruffled pleats.

Should her roommate take the big step this gown can also double as a bridesmaid outfit. A model student in study hall, Krizia's girl has a wild side which comes out at vacation

Far from the rigeurs of academic living, she bears her midrift in sexy little bando bras and bustiers and sits by the poolside in a black tank suit with a cut-out heart bearing her navel.

There's nothing controversial about these clothes, which should appeal to trend-setters and conservative alike.

Flamboyant Gianni Versace toned down his tough sexy style, and gave a new softness to his sleek man-tailored suits. Even the "enfants terribles" Franco Moschino succumbed to the new calm mood.

The Milan fashion vista is expanding, thanks to Laura Biagiotti, who was the first designer to bring Italian clothes to China, when she presented her collection in Beijing last

Celebrating her historic visit, twenty Chinese models retur-ned the favour by appearing in her oriental inspired spring collection. Sitting in the front row was

WHAT is happening in Moscow? Carried away by the whirlwind of perestroika, the Soviet artistic establishment is opening up to the long-ignored aspects of Western culture and is receiving the engravings of Salvador Dali in the highly official Pushkin museum.

The surrealism of the master from Figueras, which, owing to its fantasy, cannot be categorized, and whose genius is indisputable, is amused at the stunned looks of the Moscow nomenklatura. Something is bound to come of the shock created by this event. But how did all this come about?

This historic encounter is due to the perseverance of a Dali fan, combined with the effort of opening up to the West ins-tigated by the Gorbachev era-Pierre Argillet is mad about Dali and he believed in it so strongly that it all became pos-

A long-time disciple and friend of the master, whom he met in Paris in 1934 in Dali's most creative period, Pierre Argillet has been publishing Dali's engravings, inspired by the greatest texts, for 30 years: Apollinaire's secret letters, Ronsard's "Amours de Cassandre", Faust's Night of Wal-purgis. Mao Tse-Tung's poems, Sacher Masoch's Venus in Furs, Tirso de la Molina's Don Juan, Bullfighting. Hippies etc...

From this long friendly collaboration, a project was born. It was achieved in 1974 and consists in the creation of a Museum of Surrealism installed in the Chateau of Vauxle-Penil near Paris. In addition to Dali's engravings, sculptures and paintings, there are also numerous mementoes of surrealist days which Pierre Argillet lived through and in which he was involved.

And, even more than that.

Dali's visits to his friend in Vaux-le-Penil left amazing souvenirs. One day, as he turned up at the chateau when Pierre Argillet's daughter was playing the piano, Dali decided to give her a treat by decorating her grand piano. He did this in one hour using a brush which he tied to a stick in order to paint without disturbing the little girl who went on playing unperturbed. Another piano ended up in the basement of the chateau, transformed into a fountain. Further on, the bathroom, imagined by this great master for his wife Gala, is offered up to the looks of amazement of the visitors. A project for a balcony for the chateau, designed by Dali, is still waiting for the generosity of a patron. Far from wanting to keep these unique creations for himself, Pierre Argillet always wanted the greatest number of people to benefit from them. In 1978, he got in touch with the Soviet Embassy. But his attempts were premature. However, with the opening of the Soviet Union to the world, last year with the International Moscow Forum for the De-nuclearized World, to which Pierre Argillet was invited as a curator of the museum, his plan to organize an exhibition of surrealism took shape with the prospects of art exchanges between the East and the West.

Pierre Argillet's collection is chosen in preference to many others for the indisputable authenticity of the works he

Stencil graffiti: a new art form from Paris

By E. de Ara Gamazo

STENCIL art, consisting in painting shapes cut out in card-board or metal sheets, is a typically French form of artistic expression both in its sources of inspiration and in the geographical origin of its original development.

It appeared in the streets of Paris in 1983 and was the work of artists who were not suf-ficiently well-known to have their works grace the walls of art galleries. It spread rapidly on a large scale, thanks to its simple means of reproduction and to such an extent that it has become a component of "Art Brut" in its own right as well as becoming a medium for political or economic movements

The technique of stencilling goes back to prehistory as shown by cave paintings of hands and more stylised animal forms. Stencils have been used in all periods just like moulds in other forms of art for mass reproduction of works.

The material used for the cut-out has to be both rigid and easy to cut and it can be used over and over again for a complex repetitive design while, at the same time, being a highly economical means of expression for its users.

The return to popularity of stencilling as a means of expression comes from Mesnager's 'neo-cave-art" which he practised on his night-time strolls in the streets and along the banks of the Seine in Paris in the early 80s. Although he worked quickly without using a matrix, the white figures of his characters encouraged young artists to take up the idea of this new urban art which is accessible to the anonymous passer by and to work on it.

Originality

Despite the frequent originality in the posture and location of his characters. Mesnager seems to be a prisoner of his theme: ghost-like figures wandering in the city.

The appearance of the stencil as a means of representation thanks to graphic artists such as Blek (the precursor). Marie Rouffet (Rock'n Nana grids). V.R. Etherno, Speedy Graffito and also Miss Tic in her very Stencilling is considered an act of vandalism to other people's property, and while the City of Paris spends ever increasing sums of money removing graffiti and stencil drawings, the art form is experiencing a real explosion in Paris and other French cities.

special form of short poems, led to a burst of shapes and colours unequalled in any other city in the world for their quality and for the well thought out character of the themes chosen, most often springing from French popular culture.

Stencilling is considered as an act of vandalism to other people's property. The City of Paris spends ever increasing sums of money on removing graffiti and stencil drawings. Despite this effort, Paris, as well as the rest of France, is experiencing a real explosion of stencil graffiti (particularly in Strasbourg. Montpellier, Lyons, etc.), as are certain places abroad visited by steneil artists (the Netherlands, Portugal ...) and their local imilators.

Several trends can be noted in Parisian stencil drawings and these either depend on the socio-cultural origin of the artists or on political and social

Above all, unlike most graffiti or American "Tag" wall paintings, stencils are not the work of outcasts of society. Their work fits in with the urban reality in which they live. There are three main categories of practitioners: artists political militants and teen-

Motivations for creating stencil art both in the choice of subject and in the place to paint it are very varied. The arm of stencil artists is not provocution or damage to public property and, in this way, they are unlike those who write their names on public transport in big cities. All stencil artists want their works to have a decorative function or a message, sometimes on several levels. The notion of Art for Art's sake is clearly present in most of the works which have been noted until now. The quality of the drawing, the choice of colours and faithfulness to certain forms of style show constant research, but the intermediary stages painted on walls are ephemeral.

Contemporary comic-strip heroes and filmstars provide the main subjectmatter for teenagers, most of whom come from a wall-to-do background. They mainly use paint sprays to make their pictures and the route followed by their works of art is very personal, often the road between home and school or their friends' homes.

At a time when everything is changing and everyone is in a hurry, it is good to take the time to look at some of these stencil drawings and to look at their sometimes subtle message. If a stencil painting is not quickly removed, it can remain on your itinerary for a long time as a symbol of life on the concrete of your housing estate.

Smugglers rob Greece's heritage

By Jennifer Pagonis

ATHENS, (Reuter): International smuggling rings are spiriting away millions of dollars of antiquities from Greece every year to private collections and robbing the country of its heritage. Remote Byzantine churches are denuded of icons and frescoes ancient Amphoras are picked up off the sea floor by divers working from private yachts and museums are robbed of antiquities. Culture Ministry officials who work closely with the Paris-based international police organisation, Interpol, pinpoint West Germany, the Netherlands and Britain as centre of the illegal export trade.

The stolen goods are trans-ported out of Greece by private yacht, cors, trucks and planes concealed in luggage or other cargo, the officials say. Police figures show 22 people were arrested last year for antiquities smuggling and 560 artifacts worth an estimated seven million dollars were confiscated. But the numbers arrested reflect only a minor percentage of those actively engaged in the trade, ministry officials say. Millions of dollars worth of antiquities and artifacts leave the country each year undetected and the problem is increasing, they say. West Germany, where many Greeks work, is usually the first point of call, the officials say. Byzantine antiquities direc-

West Germany, the Netherlands and Britain have not ratified the United Nations Educational and Scientific Organisation (UNESCO) convention on the illegal traffic of cultural property.

Under the convention, articles must have documentation stating from which country they have been exported. If they fail to have the correct documents they are turned back at the customs point.

Convention

Thirty of an eligible 150 countries have ratified the convention, including Greece, the United States and Canada and, among West European countries, Italy and Spain. "Our reservation with the UN initiative was that it might hamper (the execution) of existing European measures against smuggling," a spokesman for the West German Foreign Min-

Existing local and European measures were sufficient, he said, and this was why West Germany had not ratified the man Art and Antiquities had promulgated a 'basic law of ethics' in May 1986 that ruled out participation in the illegal antiquities trade, he added.

Ratification of the conven-tion would pose legal and administrative problems, a British embassy spokesman in Athens said.

"New law would be required to bring it into effect. We do have a code of practice operated by the art business which we believe safeguards stolen art," he added.

The Netherlands has said it would be ready to ratify the convention in 1989.

Sophisticated

Culture Ministry officials say they have good relations with the famous British auction houses Sotheby's and Christies who will advise them if they think antiquities offered for sale are stolen.

Efforts to stop the illegal trade are hampered by inadequate funding for guards and an ineffective 1931 law governing punishment, the officials say.

The law must be modernised because the situation has changed since 1931," said Evy Lalapanou, an expert at the Culture Ministry. Thieves had become more sophisticated, using modern technology, like metal detec-tors, which the outdated law did not cover. Lalapanou said. A new law placed before parliament last year advocating tougher punishments has not yet been passed. Stopping the illegal trade is hard enough, but even more difficult is getting the stolen items returned.

"We are like detectives," Lalapanou said describing how Culture Ministry staff search through catalogues of auction sales looking for stolen antiquities.

Each year the Greek govern-ment pays thousands of dollars to lawyers operating on their behalf trying to recover the stolen goods.

It is an expensive, time-con-suming and difficult business. Once the item is discovered, generally an appeal has to be made to the courts to prove that it was stolen, and is from Greece.

Some cases last for years.

Year after the crash, economy sound but world changed

The first casualty was investor confidence

Two hours into the Monday morning business day last October 19, many of the economic assumptions of a whole generation went up in smoke.

"A year after the crash, much has changed. The world is different," said Robert Farrell. chief market stragetist for Merrill Lynch Co.

As the stock market went into its Black Monday freefall, the first casualty was investor considence. The belief in a large, liquid and relatively safe stock market was shattered, as Wall Street floundered amid unfilled orders and plummeting prices. Also battered in those early hours on Monday was the perception of the United States as the premier economic power. When the market fell, the world looked hopefully to Japan for stability, not to the United States whose gaping budget and trade deficits were blamed as a factor in the crash. Any old ideas that a single country can insulate itself from the world economy were swept aside. Americans woke up to newscasts about market activity in Japan, Britons nervously awaited Wall Street's opening each day and Japanese watched with alarm as the Hong Kong exchange plunged and closed its doors. The world markets moved as a global 24-hour tidal wave. The crash also drowned another cherished belief - that the stock market is a key business forecaster. Expected to herald a slump, the crash is now seen as merely the bursting of a speculative bubble — a market phenomenon relatively unrelated to a still-expanding world economy.

The company had made a public issue of Rs 800 million in equity share of Rs 10 each in December 1986 for financing partly the Rs 7,200 million fertilizer complex. The foundation stone of the complex was laid by the late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in 1984. The project is designed to produce 445,000 tomes of ammonia per year. Natural gas supplied by the Gas Authority of India Limited (GAIL) through Hazira-Bijapur Jagdishpur (HBJ) pipeline is used as a feed stock for the manufacture of ammonia and urea. The complex is having its own power generation stations, which will generate power to meet its full energy requirements.

Fertilizer Corporation, the plant is most sophisticated and will not require much time to achieve its full rated capacity. The Italian-based firm Snamproggeti, was in charge of the overall management of the project. The company will have an assured fast growing market. Its plant is located in Indo-Gangetic plain. an area with high demand potential for urea, providing an edge to the company in marketing. It will be selling its urea under its own brand name which is already popular in many Indian states.

Japan's economy suffers setbacks

TOKYO, Oct 9, (AP): Some sectors of Japan's economy have slowed as Emperor Hirohito's health declines, with retail and service sectors particularly affected, analysts and businessmen

"His illness is depressive from the economic point of view," said Richard Jerram, an economist with the Kleinwort Benson stock brokerage.
"It's depressing a whole range of industries, including advertising, hotels and retail businesses, he said in an interview. "It's reducing the amount of money people are spending,"

Jerram, however, said the drop in Japan's economic performance would only be temporary. Since Hirohito fell seriously ill on Sept 19, scores of department stores have cancelled bargain sales. Department store sales haven't declined overall, but the bargain sales had been expected to bring extra profits.

Some public authorities have scrapped plans for large-scale autumn festivals. Companies have postponed parties, and people have even put off weddings in deference to the emperor. "The lost business cannot be recaptured," Jerram said. "The services are not durable." "Consumption is going to be affected first and last," said Ron Napier, vice president of equities research at Salomon Brothers. Entire food chains, starting from fish waiting to be auctioned and ending with hotels hosting receptions, reported big losses due to cancellations. We're in trouble," said an employee at the banquet office of a major Tokyo Hotel. The cancellations are causing "quite a big loss," he said on condition of not being identified.

He estimated his hotel had to cancel about 30 parties in just two months.

"Some were catering up to as many as 2,000 people and had been reserved over a year in advance," he said.

Florists also have been stumped by the emperor's illness.
"There's a big impact on business," said an executive at the sales department of one of Japan's largest florists responsible for catering lavish autumn

Speaking on condition he not be quoted by name, the executive said one of his cancelled orders for a gala state autumn festival carried a price tag of 10 million yen ($74,600). The slow sales had also hit the price of the company's shares, he said, "but it's something that cannot be helped." In fiscal 1987, Japan's economy grew 4.2 per cent to a GNP of about $2.4 trillion.

"The slowness will be offset by a later boom," Jerram said, "but not enough to make up for the 'welcome news for economy' WASHINGTON, Oct 9.

US unemployment rate is (Reuter): A drop in the unem-ployment rate to 5.4 per cent suggests that the US economy is growing at a moderate pace -welcome news for Republican George Bush a month before the presidential election.

The report from the Labour Department on Friday that unemployment dropped last month from a rate of 5.6 per cent in August sparked rallies in the stock and bond markets.

Growth

The economy created 255,000 new jobs, an increase from 169,000 in August. While the gains were strong, they probably will not cause the Federal Reserve Board to clamp down on credit, analysts said.

They said excessive growth would threaten inflation and force the central bank to raise interest rates sharply. "It shows the economy slowed from a pell mell rate to only a solid rate. Inflation is likely to worsen more slowly now," Charles Lieberman of Manufacturers Hanover Bank said.

President Reagan, speaking in Michigan, made the point that the economy was in good shape heading into the election on Nov

He compared the economy to a Grand Prix racer and said "the way to keep it on track is to give George Bush and Dan Quayle the checkered flag."

The markets reacted favourably to the unemployment report. The Dow Jones industrial average closed up more than 40 points. Among shares gaining issues outnumbered losers three to one in heavy volume.

Prices of US Treasury bonds closed sharply higher.

balance sheet of local banks was most pronounced in their foreign liabilities (KD109.4 million) and in other liabilities (KD64 million).

This rise was due to an increase in the CBK claims on these banks in the form of discounts and KD deposits. There was also an increase of KD26 million in government deposits with them particularly with the special-ised banks, whereas the private sector deposits declined by KD66 million below their level in previous month. The private sector KD-denominated deposits with commercial banks declined at varied rates below their level in the previous month. There was a 6.6 per cent (KD39.9 million) drop in sight deposits, a 2.2 per cent (KD14.3 million) decrease in savings deposits and a 1.7 per cent decline (KD37.8 million) on time deposits. Deposits denominated in foreign currencies grew in August and for the third consecutive month by 7.4 per cent (KD77 million).

In August, the average KD exchange rate against the US dollar fell 0.44 per cent below their level in the previous month. The US dollar exchange rate ranged between 282.49 fils and 285.07 fils, a monthly average of 283.85 fils, the release noted. The CBK added against other major currencies, the KD exchange rate had a mixed performance. It increased against the Swiss franc, the French franc, the Deutsche mark and the Italian lira by 2.90 per cent, 2.37 per cent, 2.03 per cent and 1.72 per cent respectively, The KD exchange rate decreased slightly against the pound sterling by 0.66 per cent and the Japanese yen by 0.57 per cent.

In August the KD exchange rate was generally more stable than the US dollar exchange rate. The KD exchange rate rose at rates less than those of the US dollar exchange rate against the same currencies. For example, the KD exchange rate rose 3.37 per cent, 2.82 per cent and 2.48 per cent against the Swiss franc. the French franc and the Deutsche mark respectively.

At the end of August, the total balance of public debt instruments maintained its level of the previous month (KD1394.5 million), KD770 million for treasury bills and KD624.5 million for treasury bonds. The Central Bank of Kuwait offered for issues (issue No. 18 to issue No. 21) treasury bills totalling KD400 million. Meanwhile. four issues (issue No. 10 to issue No 13) of these bills, also totalling KD400 million, have matured.

Interest rates last month on interbank KD deposits on most maturities decreased slightly from the previous month. These rates ranged between 1.45 per cent (from 6.40 per cent to 6.30 per cent) and 1.86 (from 6.48 per cent to 6.36 per cent) on threemonth and one-year deposits respectively.

Interest rates on US dollar deposits increased on all maturities at rates higher than those in the previous month, reaching, for example, 5.61 per cent (from 8.10 per cent to 8.55 per cent) on three-month deposits and 6.05 per cent (from 8.54 per cent to 9.05 per cent) on one-year deposits.

Japanese firms hesitate to hire women

TOKYO, Oct 9, (Reuter): A shortage of college graduates has led to an undignified scramble among Japanese companies to recruit professional employees.

Polite gentlemanly agreements have been thrown aside in the race to find workers. But the traditional barrier against hiring women still stands.

Suitable women graduates are available, but very few are considered, even if it means leaving posts vacant, students and employment advisers said.

'They are just obsessed with prejudice against women." said Etsuko ikeda, who is studying business administration and economics at an American

*One leading consumer electronics maker told me they didn't care what I studied and asked me if I was willing to perform trivial duties like pouring tea and making photocopies," said lkeda, who is looking for a job with a Japanese company to start after she graduates next summer.

The survey shows that 60,000 women graduates are eligible for employment this year and that Japanese companies have vacancies for more than 85,000.

"However, most big companies want to hire women just as clerical workers," said Mariko Watanabe, an employment placement officer at Tokyo's

Sophia University.

Most prospective male graduates have already found lisetime employment long before the annual employment drive begins in September.

This year, lots of students got informal job offers before the employment campaign began because companies in an expansionary economy were driven to catch the brightest students," said Sophia University's Watan-

An official of the Japan Federation of Employers' Association (JFEA) said competition for male graduates was so stiff this year that many companies resorted to virtually holding prospective employees "hostage" to prevent other firms from hiring them

"Many students complained that a lot of companies took them on a trip or kept them in the office all day from August 20 so that they could not attend other companies' introductory meet, said the JFEA official, who checks that companies keep to the informal, so-called "recruitment agreement." He said he received more than 400 calls reporting violations of the agreement. Every year before the school year begins in April, industry representatives and university officials hold meetings to iron out details of the recruitment agreement.

Under this year's agreement, all Japanese and foreign companies were supposed to hold company introductory meetings from August 20 until September 4, interview students from September 5 until October 14, and offer them official employment contracts from October 15.

The work year usually starts on the following April 1, once the students graduate.

The system was set up in the 1950s by Education Ministry and the universities so that students seeking jobs were not disturbed in their studies and enjoyed equal employment opportunities, an Education Ministry official said.

"The recruitment agreement is considered only a formality by most companies and students, however, "Watanabe said. however." OAPEC prize aims to encourage research

Indian deposits in Swiss banks up 35pc

BOMBAY, Oct 9: Deposits held by Indians in Swiss banks have been increasing by 30 to 35 per cent annually during the last four years, according to a report of the Central Bank of India's economic intelligence division, reports an Indian daily. Estimating this increase of deposits by Indians in Swiss banks in the period since the International Monetary Fund put out the quantum of such deposits at about Rs 1300 crores in 1983-84, the report points out that there could be no early end to such a flow of funds. Funds

While it would be difficult to even get the total estimate of the funds held by Indians in all countries considered as tax havens, the report said the important individual reasons for such deposits are the "illegal nature of the earnings," being made by these citizens.

Referring to the M.G. Kaul committee's report submitted over 17 years ago the Central Bank of India's study said that parties involved in import and or export were also being utilised to play an important role in the illegal movement of funds from Such flow of funds from India did not constitute a problem from the concerned individual's standpoint "since he is minimising expected losses to enhance his welfare," the report said and felt that such continued outflow of funds created shortage of liquidity in the country's economic system thereby compelling it to push up interest rates on credit extended.

"Under a system of floating exchange rates, capital outflow would also tend to depreciate the domestic currency," the report has warned adding that such capital flights had serious implications on the country's economic policies.

Battered Turkish lira seen set to follow downward path

ANKARA, Oct 9. (Reuter): Turkey's currency has fallen sharply against the dollar this year and market dealers said on Friday a further slide was mevitable.

tific standards by which the research projects will be judged and agreed to continue meeting

Dealers said they expected the lira's official rate to decline to around 2,100 to the dollar by the end of 1988, compared with 1,718 now and 1,020 at the end of laşt year.

Factors behind the fall are seen as increased liquidity in the banking system and inflation, which hit an eight-year high of 81.8 per cent in September, double the September 1987 figure. High "Liquidity is high and a further lira depreciation can be expected. Yilmaz Karakoyunlu, general manager of Istanbul's Atlas Doviz A.S. Foreign Exchange Bureau, told Reuters.

"We estimate the lira's official rate at between 2,070 and 2,140 to the dollar by the end of the year." he said. Bankers said the official rate was set daily by commercial banks in tandem with the Central Bank following an unofficial practice of allowing the lira to fall at a pace of between one and five per cent over domestic inflation.

Devaluation of the lira should speed up to allow it to reach its real value against inflation," a Turkish banker said. Slide The lira's slide, which has gained momentum since the Central Bank liberalised money markets in August, and high inflation were factors behind conservative Prime' Minister Turgot Ozal's defeat in a constitutional referendum last month.

Ozal, who has made economic liberalisation his hallmark since taking office in 1983, won only 35 per cent backing in the plebiscite. widely seen as a confidence vote.

The lira's slide this month has been accompanied by a growing gap between official rates and quotes on the officially-tolerated Tahtakale black currency market in Istanbul.

The gap, reduced to zero in April after the government introduced measures to support the lira, rose to 112 lira on Thursday, with the Tahtakale quoting 1,830 lira to the dollar.

"Strong demand coming from banks pushed prices up," a Tah-takale dealer said. "Banks came to the market to supply their positions for foreign exchange transfers they have to deposit within the Central Bank."

The Central Bank moved towards lira convertibility in August and September. introducing foreign exchange interbank markets to liberalise cash and cheque transactions. The lira was quoted at 1,460 before the first market opened on August 9. The Central Bank says the lira will be convertible only if Turkey's trading partners accept the currency as a means of international payment. Bankers say firm monetary measures are needed to control inflation and other economic ills but are concerned that Ozal, facing crucial local elections next March, may shy away from politically-unpopular moves.

Bahrain urges co-ordination of oil policy

BAHRAIN, Oct 9, (Reuter): Bahrain today voiced concern at falling world oil prices and urged Gulf Arab states to co-ordinate

Pernfors upsets Curren for final

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. Oct 9, (Reuter): Mikael Pernfors of Sweden came back from losing the first set to defeat American Kevin Curren and reach the finals of the $415,000 Scottsdale Grand Prix men's tennis tournament yesterday.

The third-seeded Pernfors' 4-6 6-2 6-3 victory was the result as much on Curren's lack of confidence as the lob tactics of the 24th-ranked Swede.

Best Pernfors' final-round opponent today was to be unseeded American qualifier, Glen Layen-Nazar and Rameez Raja, six without loss overnight, shared their best stand of series - 80 with the aid of missed chances.

Rameez escaped on six off Dodemaide when Steve Waugh failed to hold a sharp chance at second slip. And Waugh was again the culprit when Mudassar, having scored seven, was missed off left-arm fast bowler Bruce Reid.

Australia eventually broke through shortly before lunch with the wicket of Mudassar, who was given out by debutant umpire Salim Badar. David Boon, at backward short-leg, dived to hold a bat-pad chance off Tim May's off-spin. Mudassar, who had scored 27, seemed very unhappy at the decision.

past Sociedad SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, Oct

9, (Reuter): Barcelona returned to the top of the Spanish League yesterday with a 1-0 away victory over Real Sociedad in a performance which lost sparkle as the game wore on.

After showing their superiority in the first half, Barcelona pulled down the shutters following an early goal and with-stood all Sociedad's efforts to pull back after the interval. The goal came in the eighth minute when midfielder Roberto Fernandez drew veteran goaikeeper Luis Arconada out of his ground and crossed for striker Julio Salinas to tap home.

Johann Cruyff's side then sat on their advantage, controlling the game from midfield and trying to pen Sociedad into their own half.
